Canada Loses Patrol Vessel, 4 Ships Sunk

OTTAWA (CP)—Naval service headquarters this afternoon announced loss of the Canadian patrol vessel Raccoon with 38 officers and men, and the sinking of four United Nations merchant ships.

The navy did not give the exact location of the sinkings, but they were known to have occurred off the eastern coast.

Loss of the Raccoon brought to eight the number of navy ships lost by Canada since the war began.

Total number of navy men officially reported missing since the outbreak of hostilities was raised to 615.

The navy statement said the Raccoon "had been presumed lost through enemy action while guarding a convoy of merchant ships, and that it must be presumed that all hands were lost with her."

"He also announced that there has been an increase in the tempo of enemy activity on Canada's side of the Atlantic."

"He regretted to have to report that four merchant ships had been lost by enemy action, with 10 of their officers and crew. The remainder of their personnel were rescued."

"For security reasons, the navy minister refrained from giving details of where and when H.M.C.S. Raccoon was lost."

"He did add, however, that she was one of an escort fleet with a convoy which came under attack from one or more enemy U-boats."

FROM PRINCE RUPERT

A list of the Raccoon casualties issued this afternoon was headed "Missing, believed lost at sea." The only B.C. man listed was Able Seaman Harry Frederick Monkle, R.C.N.V.R., whose wife resides in Prince Rupert.

The Raccoon was commanded by Acting Lt. Cmdr. John N. Smith, R.C.N.V.R., Halifax. Born in England, he was formerly first officer of the liner Lady Rodney. The ship was originally the motor yacht Halonia, built in Bath, Me., in 1939. She was requisitioned in May, 1940, and converted as an anti-submarine vessel and since been employed on anti-submarine escort and patrol duties.

In announcing an increase in the tempo of enemy activity on the Canadian side of the Atlantic, the navy's statement is understood to have referred to a swing

Liquor Curb Coming, Mr. King Tells Churchmen

BELLEVILLE, Ont., (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King told a delegation from the General Council of the United Church in Ottawa Saturday that a committee of the federal cabinet was studying ways "in which effective action could be taken" to curtail liquor consumption in Canada, it was announced here today.

The delegation from the council—now in session here—reported the Prime Minister told them he accepted their argument for curtailment of liquor as "clear and convincing," and that he would soon make an appeal for temperance in the Dominion in a national radio address.

URGENT SITUATION

Mr. King was quoted in the report as having told the delegation that he "fully recognized the seriousness and urgency of the situation," but that prolonged negotiations with the provinces over financial arrangements have made action by the Dominion government "difficult." However, restrictions the government had been forced to make along so many other lines "had opened the way now for action with regard to the liquor problem."

The report added that Rev. John Coburn, secretary of the board of evangelism and social service of the United Church, told the Prime Minister that the delegation would have to report the result of the interview to the General Council and added: "Do we understand that we are at liberty to say that the government of Canada expects in the near future to take definite action restricting liquor consumption?"

STATEMENT SOON

The Prime minister was quoted in reply: "You may. Before very long I expect the government will have a public statement on the matter to make."

Mr. Coburn was the chief speaker for the delegation in its interview with the Prime Minister, while further argument was presented by Rev. Andrew Roddan of Vancouver, Rev. H.S. B. Strohman of Lunenburg, N.S., S. J. A. Branton of Prince Albert, Sask., and C. W. Taylor of Toronto, president of the lay advisory council of the United Church. (See Ottawa Story Page 11).

Victoria Gives Cheering Welcome To 5 Heroes of 30 German Raids

Victoria, as host today to the bomber air crew who flew to Canada following a raid on Saarbrücken, paid a sincere and enthusiastic tribute to the men of the air force who in the fall of 1940 turned the tide of the war by their gallant fight to maintain supremacy of the skies over Britain, and who, in the following two years, extended Allied air superiority over all western Europe and began the systematic bombing of Axis war industries.

The five airmen are members of the famous "Moose" squadron of the R.C.A.F. Their arrival here on the morning boat marks the completion of the first half of their cross-Canada good will tour and brings to approximately 8,300 the number of miles the airmen have traveled since they embarked on their Saarbrücken raid Sept. 3.

The airmen are: Pilot Officer J. B. Higham, pilot of the two-engine Wellington bomber on 30 raids over Germany. He is from Assiniboia, Sask.

Flight Sergeant Karl Sveinson, Elfros, Sask., wireless air gunner of the bomber.

Flight Sergeant S. C. Lee, Minnedosa, Man., observer and navigator.

Sergeant Arthur Loach, Islington, Ont., front gunner.

Sergeant Donald Morrison, Sherbrooke, Que., rear gunner.

TO TELL OF BOMBINGS

Purpose of the tour is to impress on Canadians the type of men who are doing the bombing jobs on German industries, and to show to men in the forces and war industries the part R.C.A.F. crews are doing to win the war.

Although they have been on 30 raids over Germany and have dropped more than 150,000 pounds of high explosives and incendiary bombs on German cities, none of the airmen has received a scratch in his exploits.

Two or three times, however, P.O. Higham said their Wellington came back riddled with holes from flak.

The crew were in on all the big raids, having visited Cologne, Essen, Bremen and numerous other German industrial towns.

Cologne, they said, was the greatest raid. The smoke was 6,000 feet high when they left the city and the next day smoke was evident at around 17,000 feet.

ON ROSTOCK RAID

P.O. Higham was on raids on Rostock, and reported they were the longest flights he took. The aircraft was away from base for 7 hours and 50 minutes.

Although P.O. Higham did not care to discuss how he received the D.F.C., his wireless air gunner Sveinson explained that in a raid on Düsseldorf Aug. 8, one engine of the two-engine bomber was knocked out by flak.

"We figured it was our last target," Flt.-Sgt. Sveinson said.

However, P.O. Higham pulled out of a 350-mile-an-hour dive on one motor, and, undaunted, pressed on to Düsseldorf where he dropped the bombs. He brought the craft all the way back to England on a single motor.

PARADE DOWNTOWN

After meeting city officials and officers of the Western Air Command here, the five heroes paraded in the Royal Visit car, driven by Mrs. Ross Palmer, Dun- can, through downtown streets to the City Hall.

The Patricia Bay Air Force Band was in attendance.

At the City Hall the airmen were officially welcomed and signed the visitors' book. Before retiring to a lunch at the Empress they spoke a few words over the public address system to the crowds before the City Hall.

Attending at the luncheon were Lieutenant Governor W. C. Woodward, Hon. John Hart, Premier of B.C., R. W. Mayhew, M.P., Air Vice-Marshal L. F. F. Stevenson, and other air force and civic officials.

During the afternoon, with "Miss Canada" serving as escorts, the airmen drove through the city and visited the Military Hospital at the Normal School.

Late in the afternoon they left by plane for Vancouver, to proceed to Kamloops and other eastern points.

At Kamloops the airmen will visit Mrs. J. G. Fulton, mother of Sqdn. Ldr. John "Moose" Fulton, after whom the "Moose" squadron, in which they flew, was named. The squadron leader was recently reported missing after air operations overseas.

Unemployed Women Start Registration

Registration of between 2,000 to 3,000 unemployed women in Greater Victoria got under way at the office of the National Selective Service officer for Victoria, 534 Broughton Street, today.

To avoid congestion registrations are taken alphabetically, names beginning with A to C being taken today, other letters being divided among the remaining five days of the week up to and including Saturday.

C. A. Mudge, Selective Service officer, said the registration was going smoothly and that, including waiting in line, each registrant was in the building approximately 20 minutes.

National Union of Paper Makers said 600 men were involved. Company officials said they did not know the number of men involved.

Joins 6th Division

OTTAWA (CP)—Appointment of Maj. M. Montgomery, 50, of Vancouver, formerly of the directorate of mechanical maintenance in the branch of the master-general of the ordnance at National Defence headquarters, as deputy assistant director of ordnance services for the 6th Canadian Division—a home defence force—was announced today by Defence Minister Ralston.

In 1940 he was appointed captain and adjutant of an army training centre at Vernon, B.C., later went to the Gordon Head officers' training centre, Victoria, and then came to Ottawa.

He was born in England and served in the first Great War.

Russians Lose Ground, Then Beat Back Nazi Wedge

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW (AP)—Fresh hordes of Nazi troops smashed today at the approaches to Stalingrad in an obvious all-out effort to storm the city whatever the cost in blood, but the Russians said that after yielding precious ground the Red army halted and pushed back a new penetration south-west of the city.

Both to the west and southwest the Germans were pouring tanks and armored cars and new reserves into the bloody struggle, but the midday communique indicated the Russians were holding.

Earlier the Russians had reported the capture by the Germans of an unidentified "populated place" southwest of Stalingrad. From all reports it was apparent that the crucial test for the beleaguered city was at hand, after three weeks of frightful struggle.

(The German high command claimed Sunday that German troops were fighting in the southern streets of Stalingrad and that siege lines about the city had been tightened.)

Enemy Halted By Tank Unit

A Soviet tank detachment was credited with halting the German penetration of the Russian positions southwest of the lower Volga city. After the Germans had broken through, the Russian tanks moved into the battle, knocked out five German tanks and 11 armored cars and supported the infantry in restoring the Soviet position, the Soviet Information bureau said.

West of the city, too, the Russians were held on the defensive by masses of troops and tank forces. In the one phase of this fighting described by the communique seven German tanks were disabled by artillery and anti-tank fire while 13 others turned and fled.

The Red army was fighting hand-to-hand over a broad area west and southwest of Stalingrad, Pravda said in a front-page dispatch.

Nazi Air Squadrons Cease Bombing

German air units which went up to bomb the Russians were forced to turn back without carrying out their mission when it became obvious that bombing of the massive close-quarter struggle below would destroy Germans as well as Russians, it was reported.

Pravda said the present battles were as bloody as any so far experienced.

A bitter fight apparently has developed in the Sinyavino area east of Leningrad, where the Russians seem to be trying to cause the position of Leningrad in preparation for the second winter of siege.

At Voronezh, on the Don River some 300 miles northwest of Stalingrad, the Germans Sunday launched an offensive with one infantry division supported by 100 tanks, but in the severe fight which developed on the western bank of the river, 2,000 German officers and men were killed or wounded, the Soviet Information Bureau said.

Germans Claim Hold in Outskirts

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts, AP)—The German high command claimed today a German infantry attack, divisions strong, had pierced stubbornly defended Red army lines, penetrating the outskirts of Stalingrad and occupying heights overlooking the city northwest of the central district.

Gains also were reported in fighting in the Caucasus. East of the German-occupied Black Sea port of Novorossiisk, a fortified mountain position was successfully stormed, the high command said.

The Germans also were said to have "pierced" fiercely-defended Russian positions on the Terek River front on the way to Grozny, inflicting heavy casualties on the Russians.

British Move
Steadily Forward
In Madagascar

LONDON (CP)—British spokesmen announced today the capture of Maevatanana, 150 miles by road northwest of Tananarive, capital of Madagascar, and information reaching some military quarters here indicated that advance forces had pushed on to within 100 miles of the capital.

By this account British forces had covered fully half the distance to the capital—230 miles from the northwest Madagascar port of Majunga, one of three landings which they made last Thursday in a move to prevent use of the French island by the Axis.

Week-end reports placing British troops 70 miles or less from Tananarive were unsubstantiated.

FROM THREE DIRECTIONS
A communique said the forces pushing into Madagascar from three directions were making good progress, and that besides capturing Maevatanana, advanced detachments were moving on across the mountains to the southeast toward Andriba, about 125 miles north of the capital on another road.

The Allied forces which landed farther south of Morondava were reported meeting "little or no opposition" on the advance inland. From Ambanja, on the northwest coast, another column was reported "making good progress" southward.

CROSS RIVER

The force advancing from Majunga encountered resistance from Vichy forces at a bridge over the river Betsiboka, but this was overcome Saturday.

The defending force has dropped the middle span of the suspension bridge into the river to hold up the British forces.

The most serious fighting possibly still is ahead, for the 4,000-foot plateau on which Tananarive is located is said to be the best-defended area of Vichy-controlled Madagascar. It is approached by steep, winding roads.

FROM MORONDAVA
The second column was coming up from the southwest of Tananarive after landing at Morondava, on the west coast more than 350 miles airline south of Majunga.

Sunday's communique said it was proceeding satisfactorily toward Maobositra, 200 miles airline east of Morondava and 100 miles south of Tananarive, but its exact location also was not given.

A third force which went into action in northern Madagascar was disclosed to have occupied Ambanja on Saturday after overcoming slight resistance. No casualties were reported from either side.

A delayed message said British troops took Majunga in a three-hour fight before breakfast the first day of the campaign. The total cost to both sides was given as between 30 and 40 casualties.

Italians Sav British
Struck at Tobruk

ROME (From Italian Broadcasts, AP)—An Italian communique today said:

"Last night the enemy, after a prolonged air attack carried out by a large number of planes, attempted with the support of parachute troops to effect a landing from light naval units in the Tobruk area (vital Axis supply port some 300 miles west of the Egyptian battlefield).

(In London British military sources today declined comment on the Italian high command's claim.)

"Immediate intervention of Italian-German defences frustrated the attempt.

"The attempt was supported by six naval units, made up of cruisers and destroyers. Two of the enemy warships which were hit were set afire. One of them later sank."

The communique claimed German fighter planes destroyed two planes in air combats which accompanied the landing attempt, while Axis anti-aircraft defences shot down four more.

The high command claimed the Italian hospital ship Arno had been torpedoed and sunk the night of Sept. 9 about 40 miles off Tobruk, although she was "marked with the international sign of the red cross and strongly illuminated."

"The majority of those on board, including members of the Red Cross, were saved," the bulletin asserted.

Today it appears as a formal park, with flowers, shrubs and trees lining broad walks, lower photo. It was opened at the week-end by Mayor Rossi.

Roosevelt Says

U.S. Must Double
War Production

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt told Congress today the United States is producing only a little more than 50 per cent of its maximum possible war production and solemnly warned:

"Not until we have reached the maximum—and we can do this only by stripping out civilian economy to the bone—can our fighting men and those of our allies be assured of the vast quantities of weapons required to turn the tide.

"Not until then can the United Nations march forward together to certain victory."

TOTALS $6,480,000,000
The President's statement was in a letter transmitting the sixth quarterly lend-lease report in which he spoke of Britain as an "offensive base." The report showed such aid to the British Commonwealth of Nations and 35 other countries during the 18 months since the program began totaled $6,480,000,000, with actual exports amounting to $3,525,000,000. In the same time lend-lease countries purchased $5,800,000,000 worth of goods, including munitions, from the United States.

Lend-lease help now is being provided at the rate of $8,000,000,000 a year, with the maximum aid possible under 15 separate appropriation acts reaching almost $63,000,000,000.

At present, the report said, about 35 per cent of lend-lease exports are going to the United Kingdom, 35 per cent to Russia and 30 per cent to the Middle East, Australia and other areas.

"Aid to China," it added, "has been limited by the difficulty of transportation, but the development of other means of transportation will relieve this situation."

STILL IN LEAD
Compared with their available resources, he said, Britain and Russia had produced more weapons than the United States.

"And they are continuing to produce to the limit in spite of the fact that Russia is a battlefield and Britain an offensive base."

The report said lend-lease funds now are being spent for many special projects, including further tests of the "seamobile," shallow-draft cargo vessel originally known as the "sea otter," and for saving shipping space and refrigeration capacity by the development of dehydrated foodstuffs.

(The "sea otter" is described as being virtually immune to torpedo attack.)

Bacon Runs Out

Don't Buy Pork
Ottawa Appeals

OTTAWA (CP)—J. G. Taggart, chairman of the bacon board and foods administrator of the War-time Prices and Trade Board, is appealing to consumers throughout Canada to refrain from buying fresh pork, bacon or ham during the next seven weeks.

Purpose of the appeal—issued through the War-time Prices and Trade Board—is to enable the bacon board to maintain satisfactory weekly shipments of bacon to Britain so as to assure the continuance of the British bacon ration at the present level.

(The bacon ration in Britain is four ounces per person a week).

With the co-operation of Canadian consumers during the next few weeks, until about Nov. 1, shipments of bacon to Britain can be maintained, Mr. Taggart said. It is expected that additional hogs will be marketed early in November.

The bacon board is reducing the quantity of pork and bacon that may be sold in the domestic market to 50 per cent of the normal weekly sales in 1940. Consumers in Canada, Mr. Taggart said, can control the volume of hogs slaughtered on farms or by butchers for sale on city markets or in small shops in villages, towns and cities. If the consumer refrains from buying pork for the next seven weeks many more hogs will be marketed through the plants producing export bacon.

SHARP DECLINE

The present bacon agreement with Britain calls for not less than 600,000,000 pounds of bacon and pork, or average weekly shipments of approximately 11,500,000 pounds. Up until a few weeks ago, Mr. Taggart said, weekly shipments had been maintained at a satisfactory level. During the past four or five weeks however, there had been a sharp decline in the shipments to Britain which Canada agreed to make.

The shortage reflects the present temporary over-all meat shortage; the foods administrator explained. Consumption of all meats has increased in Canada due to the large numbers of men in training camps, the fact that the increase in employment has brought about greater spending power, and also because of the increased supplies needed for provisioning ocean-going vessels.

The shortage of beef has brought about an increased demand for pork and bacon during the period when hog marketings are normally the lightest. Recently packing plants have been supplying the domestic market with full quotas of pork products permitted by the bacon board and many hogs that have not passed through packing plants have been sold on city markets and in small shops.

No Slowdowns,
Says Labor Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—A. R. Mosher,

president of the Canadian Congress today called on labor to the annual convention of the Congress today called on labor to centre its entire efforts on essential war production and avoid disputes or other action which might hamper Canada's output of war materials.

"We must not endanger the war effort, no matter how great the provocation may be to do so, by strikes or slowdowns in war industry," he said. "Not a single day's production of war materials should be lost through any action on the part of the worker, for that means a loss. Not to the employer or the government alone, but to the nation and to the Allied cause."

"Even though this may entail the acceptance of hardships, the endurance of unfair treatment and pork, of chain stores and independent shops in towns and cities, of meat and grocery shops in the villages, and of hotel, restaurants, and dining-car operators throughout the country.

The board suggests fowl, fish and eggs as substitute foods.

Last summer, when Canadians were asked to eat less bacon and pork for a period to assure early completion of the second war-year contract with Britain they responded "splendidly," said Mr. Taggart. If the buying public use other foods instead of pork from now until the end of October, satisfactory weekly shipments of bacon to Britain can be assured.

Chief defect in the government's labor policy in the past had been failure to provide protection for the right of workers to organize freely and bargain collectively, Mr. Mosher said. An additional source of criticism had been failure of the government and employers to co-operate with organized labor in calling national conferences in basis industries, to form industrial councils and provide adequate labor representation on government bodies.

TAXES AS HIGH AS POSSIBLE

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP)—Hon. C. W. Gibson, Minister of National Revenue, declared here at the week-end that taxes in Canada are now as high as the people can afford to pay, in the opinion of the government.

Here during an inspection trip of all customs and income tax offices, Mr. Gibson said the imposition of taxes beyond a certain point would be unjust to some citizens because of medical expenses, mortgage payments and other financial obligations they will have to meet.

"That is why," he said, "the government has planned to raise about half of its expenses through taxes and half by loans."

Scenic Timber Area Destroyed by Logging

VANCOUVER—Our boys in distance lands are fighting to save our heritage for us and surely we at home can save their country for them," said J. B. Leyland, director of the British Columbia Natural Resources Conservation League, on his return here after inspecting the timber cutting in the Butte Lake area of Strathcona Park.

With him were H. F. Bird and D. T. Thomson, also directors. They said that overhead logging operations were destroying the whole scenic approach to the lake and urged that government action to save the area be not delayed.

KIMBERLEY (CP)—Lars Wick, Kimberley, has received word from the chief of air staff, Ottawa, that his son, Sgt. Henry Wick, reported missing Aug. 18, following the Dieppe raid, is a prisoner of war in Germany.

Local Writers Win Awards

MONTREAL (CP)—The 21st annual convention of the Canadian Authors' Association ended Saturday night shortly after Alfred Noyes, well-known British poet, had told delegates during an address that the Allied Nations are "not going to win this war unless we stick to our Christian beliefs, unless we stick to the things we say we are fighting for."

Addressing delegates at the association's annual banquet, Mr. Noyes said that evil has been infused into literature in England and Europe during the past 25 years and as a result the people have developed a spirit of "cynicism and defeatism."

"Unless we get rid of that spirit of cynicism and defeatism we are going to lose this war," he said. "You cannot go into a war saying you are a Christian nation and at the same time deny all Christian principles."

"In Christianity you find the answer to every single one of the problems in the world today. . . . Unless we recapture what our forefathers had, I don't think there is any hope for the world we live in today."

J. Pierrepont Moffat, United States minister to Canada, presented medals awarded to winners of the Governor-General's 1941 literary contest.

Anne Marriott of Victoria, B.C., won the award for her book of poetry, "Calling Adventures," and Emily Carr, also of Victoria, won an award for her "Klee Wyck," a series of prose sketches of British Columbia Indians. Allan Sullivan of Toronto won the award for fiction with "Three Came to Ville Marie."

Mr. Noyes praised the writings of Audrey Alexandra Brown of Victoria and said that "she has that certain something in her poems which we have been losing in England and Europe for the past 25 years."

He said that if the people of Europe held such ideas as Miss Brown expressed in her poem, "There is Indeed a City" the world "might not be confronted with a war today."

Out of every 1,000 American-built bombers and flying boats sent across the Atlantic in R.A.F. ferry command operations during the past year, 995 arrived safely.

Russians Raid East Germany

U-Boat Yards at Bremen Blasted 100th Time

LONDON (CP)—British, Canadian and Russian bombers, delivering a new twin blow to the flanks of the Axis, 1,000 miles apart, smashed at the northwest German port of Bremen Sunday night in an R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. attack probably hundreds of planes strong, and raided Bucharest and Ploesti oil region of Rumania from bases deep in Russia.

Lone-flying British bombers were back over northwestern Germany again at dawn in follow-up attacks, the Air Ministry reported, announcing a total loss of 19 British bombers.

The Air Ministry said the 100th attack of the war on Bremen was delivered by a "very strong force," a phrase taken here to indicate that bombers by the hundreds were used. Three R.C.A.F. squadrons participated.

Returning Canadian pilots reported visibility through rifts in the light clouds was good and said they unloaded their tons of explosives over the Weser River port by the light of raging fires.

SAANICHTON MAN THERE

Sgt. John Gravelet-Chapman, Saanichton, B.C., said they could see the fires of Bremen from 100 miles away.

Wing Cmdr. Len Fraser of Vancouver, who led his Halifax squadron into action for the first time since he assumed control several weeks ago, said "Bremen really got it this time."

A veteran of four other raids on that city, Fraser said, "each time I've been there before the fire were scattered, but this time they were in on big mass and you could see the buildings burning quite distinctly."

"The only thing I'm afraid of," he added, "is that a good many of the bombs dropped by those who were late arrivals on the target may have gone into fires already burning."

"I saw three big fires and several smaller ones," said Sgt. Art Greene of Bear River, N.S., who flew with Sgt. Ben Copeland of Moose Jaw, Sask.

Sgt. Eddie Carelton of Toronto got a crack at a group of three enemy fighters which attacked a plane captained by Sgt. Nat Daggett of Salmon Arm, B.C., over the Frisian Islands. A red glow was seen from the first enemy fighter and the crew believes it was damaged if not destroyed.

P.O. Bill Colledge of Vancouver said the target was well alight when he and Sgt. E. A. Taylor of Vancouver and Flt. Sgt. Joe Steward of Calgary got there.

Sgt. Bill Murray of Armstrong, B.C., captain of one crew, said "It was a straightforward, good show. . . . I saw our bombs burst in the eastern part of town."

London Paper Scores Herridge

LONDON (CP)—The suggestion of Hon. W. D. Herridge, former Canadian minister at Washington, that the United Nations should unite under the leadership of President Roosevelt, was an "undiplomatic performance" that catered to Nazi propaganda, "Candidus," out spoken political critic of the Daily Sketch, wrote today.

In a luncheon address in Ottawa, Friday, Herridge said: "Mr. Roosevelt must be proclaimed leader by the acknowledged leader of the British Empire. Mr. Churchill, speaking on behalf of the Empire, must declare that victory demands a leader for the English-speaking world, and that that leader is the President of the United States."

"Candidus" commented: "If Goebbels reads Major Herridge's speech—he's certain to read it sooner or later—his response will be one of unqualified pleasure. Ever since the U.S.A. entered the war Goebbels has been trying to drive a wedge between the British and Americans, his principal argument being that the U.S.A. and the President are aiming at hegemony of the world, beginning with hegemony of the British Empire. That insinuation never has been taken seriously by the Empire."

"But it is, to say the least, a pity that anybody of any prominence in the Empire should supply Goebbels with the faintest shred of apparent justification for exulting 'I told you so.'"

The columnist added that he did not believe there is a man available fully equipped to be the supreme warlord of the English-speaking peoples. "That super genius is not to be found on earth," he said. "There never has been such a super genius."

BOMBING ADMITTED

The Berlin radio, broadcasting the German communique, said Russian bombers were over eastern Germany during the same night, and quoted dispatches from Bucharest that the Rumanian capital and Ploesti region to the north were attacked by Soviet bombers.

The dispatches described the Ploesti attacks as ineffective and said Bucharest had two alarms during the night and some bombs were dropped but that no damage was caused.

The German Transocean Agency said: "It is rumored parachutists were landed, but no confirmation of this report is forthcoming."

Bremen, site of important submarine building yards and the Focke-Wulf airplane factory, was last bombed Sept. 4.

The German radio said British raiders had caused "material damage and destruction to buildings, particularly in residential quarters," in an attack on a "harbor town," but did not otherwise identify the target.

It was the first R.A.F. attack on Germany since last Thursday night, when Duesseldorf was blasted by a powerful force of R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. raiders.

The Berlin radio also disclosed that Russian bombers had been over eastern Germany, but it asserted that only slight damage at isolated places was caused.

Both the Berlin and Vichy radio stations reported Budapest and other points in eastern Hungary, which the Russians bombed last Wednesday night, had air-raid alarms. The broadcasts reported no hostile planes had crossed the frontier.

RADIO SILENCE

Broadcasting stations at Bratislava, in Czechoslovakia, and in Rumania also went off the air during the night.

There was no German air activity over Britain Sunday night, but it was announced the Nazis have been employing a new type of sub-sonic bomber, powered with super-charged diesel motors in recent daylight raids.

The planes, described as modified Junkers 86's fitted with experimental pressure cabins are said to have operated at an altitude of nearly 40,000 feet.

This plane is the third addition to the German air force which has made its appearance in recent daylight attacks on British cities.

The others are the four-motored Heinkel 177, which carried eight tons of bombs, and the Focke-Wulf 190—a speedy fighter equipped to carry light bombs.

New Terrorism In Yugoslavia

LONDON (CP)—German reports of a revolt in Bulgarian Macedonia and the proclamation of a state of siege in Skopje in former Yugoslavia aroused fear in free Yugoslav government circles here today that a new Axis wave of terror against civilians populating that area might be beginning.

The report, which came from German circles in Stockholm, was received with extreme suspicion by these sources, who pointed out there was nothing to indicate any serious defection among the Bulgarian people themselves.

It is not doubted here that sentiment for the Russians is still strong among the Bulgarian peasants and possibly in the army. It was conceded this Slavic bond of sympathy might facilitate Russian efforts to lend aid to the Serb army, but it was added that the Yugoslav government has no such specific information.

JUNE REPORT

This Yugoslav source recalled the German claim in June that 18 Soviet agents had landed in Bulgaria by parachute and from submarines and were condemned to death.

The most recent demonstration of pro-Allied action in Bulgaria was the dynamiting of the Gafrovo railway station which, DNB, German news and propaganda agency, said brought the arrest of 100 Communist sympathizers.

The German report of the "revolt" said that revolutionary groups were spreading terror among the population and that Bulgarian officials had been killed.

Sixteen Italians and 11 Yugoslav soldiers were reported killed at Trebinje, near Agusa in occupied Yugoslavia, in a new outburst of fighting.

Canadian Airmen in Thick of Sky Battles

Shortly after this photograph was made Pilot Officer B. "Scotty" Murray of Halifax, was back in the thick of the Dieppe fighting. He scored one "probable" and one "damaged" and two days earlier, when his squadron was escorting U.S. flying fortresses on a raid on Rouen, he shared credit for destruction of a Focke-Wulf.

'In Cairo Soon,' Mother Wrote German Lad, Now Dead in Desert

By H. M. HALTON

FROM THE DESERT BATTLE

(Special Cable) (Delayed)—Rommel has been mauled and repulsed. The Nile delta breathes easier. But this was not the decisive battle we expected. The decisive battle will be the one in which either Rommel's army or ours is destroyed.

But last week's battle, though undecided, was a splendid victory. The German commander came forward with two German and two Italian armored divisions and a crack German motorized division. He came north against our positions held by New Zealanders and British infantry. His object was to split the 8th Army and crush it if he found it weak. He found it strong—strong physically and in morale—and the army welcomed the break.

STRONGER EACH MORNING

We had known it was coming. For days we waited. Four mornings we woke before dawn and found the battlefield not yet erupting. Four days the tension grew, especially among the fine new British troops I was with. (Some of them were men of Dunkerque, but others were waiting for the terrible initiation.) Three times I wrote in my diary, "But they don't attack." A ripe moon was waning. And each morning our generals thanked their God. For each morning our positions became stronger, our plans more perfected, our new boys more accustomed to the desert hell.

On the fifth morning—after I had shaved and written in my diary, "But they don't attack"—a friend hurried over from brigade headquarters and said, "It's started."

We laughed. When the Germans attack, they attack. They blitz. They pounce with everything they've got and 200 dive-bombers. But now the desert was still, silent.

PRETEND CRIPPLED DUCK

Yet it was true. Rommel's main mass of manoeuvre was moving forward, and there was no noise because we were letting him come. A few hours later his tanks were attacking our positions. They were smashed and defeated by our heavy tanks, our artillery and our aircraft, and their flank harried by our light armored brigades hitting and running from the east. The next day the enemy tried again and again was beaten. And his losses were three to one of ours. He spent the next two days pretending to be a crippled duck and trying to draw us on. On the fifth day he withdrew.

This was written in a depression of soft sand called Dair el Regil. (In Desolations Blue). Here the Germans got the worst of their mauling. I am with a light armored force which is sparring with the enemy's rear guard as his main body withdraws through the minefields at the base of a steep rocky hill called Himeimat. There is shooting just ahead. Fast light honey tanks are bracing up the enemy's delaying forces and others are stabbing boldly at his lines of communication from the edge of the Qattara Depression. But the battle is nearly over.

It is dawn. It will be over 100 in the shade here in a few hours, but now there is a cool wind and the treacherous, moody desert is touched with pink. I shudder at what I see—though it is a familiar sight.

ROMMEL'S DEAD UNBURIED

The fierce, dreary wasteland stretches away and away. Vast plains of hard gravel and soft sand, utterly dead except for clumps of camel scrub; "distance piled upon distance farther than human endurance"—except that men endure it: blinding light and clouds of choking sands; and the harsh scream of shells. Around about and below us in the depression are a number of destroyed German tanks and transport vehicles, some of them still burning. Here and there are Rommel's unburied dead.

In one dead German's kit was a letter from his mother. "How happy we were," she wrote from Kaiserslautern, "to know that you had left the Libyan Desert behind and were in beautiful Egypt. Beautiful Egypt! Except in the delta, Egypt is exactly as beautiful as Libya. There is sand, and there is the great sand sea which once swallowed up an army of 50,000 men, and then there is sand again for 1,000 miles this way and 1,000 miles that."

Another German mother wrote to a lad who lies near me now with his face in the sand: "Soon you will be in Cairo smelling the spices in the bazaars." But all poor Karl got was the smell of death.

Two Germans lie crumpled inside their burned-out tank. Another clutches at his throat in death. Nearby three prisoners taken yesterday sit on the ground exhausted and sullen.

SWIFT, INDEPENDENT

Our mobile columns consist of light tanks, armored anti-tank guns, 25-pounders and motorized infantry, swift-moving, independent striking forces. Each of these light armored columns has a unit of crack infantry. Yesterday I accompanied a mobile column harrying the enemy's rear guard. Armored cars went scouting ahead, followed by light tanks and 25-pounders. For an hour we bumped south and west until word came from the scouts that 10 enemy tanks had been sighted.

Another come-on game. Trying to draw our tanks into a trap. But they didn't know what we had for them. A troop of 25-pounders were in action within 10 minutes. Ten minutes later came the report: "The enemy tanks have waddled off."

DESERT AT WILDEST

Once I sat in the soft sand under the light shelling from enemy self-propelled guns three miles away. The desert scene was now at its wildest, its dreariest, its most God-forgotten. Twenty-five-pounders were shelling enemy transport across the minefield, and the enemy was shelling us. Plumes and veils and clouds of sand mixed with black smoke and cordite fumes drifted across the wadis. Covered thick in yellow dirt, every soldier looked unearthly. Across the minefields there was a sudden belch of flame from some German petrol or ammunition vehicle which had been hit, and a few seconds later came an evil vomiting roar. Hell's kitchen! I looked at one tank crew after another as they sat on or beside their tanks waiting and silent. Thank God, the battle was won.

The column jolted back to Dier el Regil. There was still fighting a few miles away. I read German letters and old German newspapers. Coolness and darkness came, and we drew together in a close laager surrounded by tanks, while flares lit the dark sky as Boche signaled to Boche. For the last time I unrolled my bed for a night in a close laager on a desert battlefield. Quiet men gathered in little knots to smile and to hear on a radio the story of their own victory.

WRITE RUNNING STORIES

It might be expected that the first news of victory would come from the four or five war correspondents who go into battle with the army, live on the battlefield and risk their lives in order to give the public genuine and accurate action and color pictures of the battle and of the fighting of British troops. But it is seldom that way. We write the running story of a battle—as it develops. These are held up or hopelessly emasculated. The reasons for this are sometimes good, though sometimes not so good. Sometimes it is merely the result of confusion and ineptitude somewhere. When news is released it comes from Mr. Willkie or from a communique handed out in Cairo to war correspondents whose duty it is to stay there and to other war correspondents who stay there anyway.

After the news in that desert laager the men sat in the sand listening to music from home. It happens every night. Think of it. You listen in your homes with your children at your side. Think of the men in a close laager in the lonely wastes. This particular one I shall never forget. It was my last.

Uniform Prices For Canned Fruits

OTTAWA (CP)—A more uniform ceiling on canned goods in Canada is expected to result from a revised order on canned fruits and vegetables, announced today by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Earlier price regulations had resulted in widely-varied prices as between different districts in the Dominion, and canners' maximum prices had been established on the basis of 1940 costs. The new order will overcome difficulties experienced by distributors of the 1942 pack who were "squeezed" by the prices fixed for canners, the board announced.

Also, through the former order, an artificial scarcity developed, the board statement said. The new regulation would ensure an adequate supply.

Canned tomatoes, tomato juice, peas, corn, green and waxed beans, peaches, Bartlett and Kieffer pears, plums and apricots, which together make up more than 80 per cent of the trade, have been subject until now to individual retail ceilings established in the basic period, while canners' prices were governed by specific maximum rates, fixed in a board order effective last July 1.

BOMBS AND ROME

When my friend W. D. Munro asks the question: "Why is Rome not bombed?" I feel sure he is asking a question that is common to the minds of many people.

When Jimmy Doolittle flew over the Emperor's Palace in Tokyo, by his own public statement, he admitted that he had been instructed not to bomb the palace. A friend who pays me an occasional visit, offered a very simple explanation to this mysterious action, by saying: "The U.S.A. realized that the killing of Hirohito would make the Japanese people very angry." According to this reasoning, Mr. Munro should find no difficulty in understanding why Rome has not been bombed.

The Japanese people in the U.S.A. are a very small minority of the citizenry of that country, therefore, I considered the gesture a very nice one—a kind of returning good for evil. . . .

A solemn promise may mean a great deal to some people, but, when the matter of sacredness enters upon the scene—like poverty entering a happy home—love will fly out the window.

"Oh, ye of little faith," Rome and its people have that quality in an overflowing measure, therefore, air raid shelters are not required.

If Mr. Munro will take the trouble to look up the remarks of Lord Stroboli in the House of Lords within recent months, I feel sure he will have no difficulty in finding out the reason "Why Rome was not bombed." I admit, though, that it will be necessary for him to read between the lines.

"Before they reached shore they were discovered, shelled and their boat was sunk by a direct hit."

"Three British officers and one De Gaulle (Fighting French) naval officer were taken prisoner, and the bodies of a major, a sergeant-major and one private were recovered."

Is There No Way?

REGARDLESS OF THE DESCRIPTION of conditions in India which Mr. Churchill gave to the House of Commons the other day, and he did not appear to be alarmed, well-qualified correspondents on the spot are far from sure that the Prime Minister has painted a correct verbal picture. Latest accounts speak of infiltration of fifth columnists from Burma, a development, if true, not pleasant to contemplate. The campaign in the Malay Peninsula instantly comes to mind. And while there is little that we in Canada can do about India, since it is the prime problem of the government at Westminster, what takes place in that vast subcontinent of many creeds and customs must necessarily have a direct bearing on the future progress of the war and how it will affect this part of the British Commonwealth. Not for us to suggest that some form of compromise is or ought to be possible; but if the door to further negotiation, no matter by whom instigated, is to be stubbornly bolted and barred against all attempts to find a solution, we and the rest of the United Nations may soon be in for some rude shocks.

To minimize the enormous difficulties which stand in the way of anything approaching an amicable settlement is to invite ridicule. No modern political problem has presented so many complexities to any government. This fact, by the same token, is all the more reason why even one so implacable in mind and spirit—as convinced he is right—as Mr. Churchill unquestionably is should not remain even temporarily deaf to all the suggestions which earnest souls are now putting forward. Nobody at Westminster would lose political "face" or doubtful imperial prestige by tendering an invitation, for example, to President Roosevelt to take a hand in trying to discover ways and means of removing the threat of further disturbance while the enemy stands gloatingly at the gates. There is nothing we can think of to prevent Mr. Mackenzie King from once again assuming the interpretative role between Washington and London. He has succeeded before. India is assuredly the United Nations' sinister cloud.

Some Must Grumble

SOME CANADIANS AND ONE OR TWO newspapers have so far lost their sense of proportion that they are still objecting to what can be called the "Canadianization" of the Royal Canadian Air Force. It has evidently reached the point at which Air Marshal Harold Edwards, commanding officer of the R.C.A.F. force in Great Britain, has found it necessary and desirable to deal with such criticism. He is defending, and rightly so, the policy announced by Air Minister Power in the House of Commons nearly three months ago, which foreshadowed "the construction overseas of squadrons and higher formations with all-Canadian personnel, commanded by Canadian officers," and a policy of "posting Canadian personnel to squadrons in which Canadians are already serving" with great distinction.

Briefly put, the Royal Canadian Air Force in Britain has grown to such large proportions as to entitle it to anything calculated to make for smoother running, not only in the fullest operational intimacy with the Royal Air Force, but in the best interests of the Canadians themselves as Canadians. "All I know," said Air Marshal Edwards in a carefully-prepared statement on Saturday, "is that I championed the policy called 'Canadianization,' which means bringing our R.C.A.F. boys together into Canadian formations." He cited the case of a Canadian boy who lost his best pal in a raid over Germany; the new policy thus means that the personal troubles of the boy who got safely back to his base "can be lifted from him," because he now can be left with those fellow Canadians whom "he has been sent over here to meet."

Air Marshal Edwards speaks not only as the commander in Britain of the R.C.A.F.; he speaks for the individual Canadian, whose problems he is trying to understand. In other words, he is trying to realize how the parents of these boys at home feel when the fateful message reaches them. Criticism of that basic idea, and such as that to which the Air Marshal deemed it advisable to reply, takes on the flavor of politics. Perhaps some do not realize that at present flying men from this Dominion are posted to no fewer than 700-odd Royal Air Force units. Why there should be the least objection to this "Canadianization" process—bringing these boys into units composed wholly of Canadians—for the life of us we do not know. Britain naturally understands the sense of it. Surely we in this country can and should.

Wartime Prospecting

BRITISH COLUMBIA, AS ONE OF THE richest mineral areas of Canada, already yielding substantial quantities of lead and zinc, and potentially a major producer of copper, has a particular interest in the controversy reported from Ottawa over the advisability of encouraging wartime prospecting. On one side it is being urged that a more aggressive policy should be adopted to uncover and develop new sources of strategic metals. On the other there is the argument for concentrating more intensive development of what has been proven instead of dissipating energies on what it may or may not be possible to open in the way of new deposits.

The Financial Post reminds us of our serious need of certain metals either cut off entirely or menaced by Axis conquests. If Canada could provide additional and quick sources of these, then almost any encouragement toward the necessary prospecting would be justified. Against this, neither Canada nor her partners can afford to waste time, money and labor in a wild goose chase. To be useful, any new materials must be made available quickly.

The problem, it seems, is not to be solved by general rules. Early in the war steps were wisely taken to test out reported deposits in this province of some of the rarer minerals much in demand for war purposes. The result has been that our war industries now have available supplies of these minerals from British Columbia. At the same time little or nothing was done to widen the production of such a basic metal as copper, a shortage of which is now looming. Negotiations have been reported under way for months looking to the opening of potential copper areas in this province, but action is still awaited. If such had been taken early in the war, production might have been already under way. Now, because of the manpower problem, an attempt to add to total production by developing new properties might be possible only by diverting labor from older operations and thus cutting down their output. It is probably this factor, more than anything else, that is influencing Ottawa's cautious course at present.

Traitors in Double Harness

MARSHAL PETAIN AND PIERRE Laval have just issued a decree which orders suitable and available citizens of what once was the free and independent Republic of France to go to work anywhere their services may be required. One interpretation, and one only, must be put on this new manifestation of the extent to which both these Frenchmen have sold their country to their lord and master in Berlin: Only a trickle of volunteers responded to Laval's appeal for volunteers to work in German factories; and most of these were driven to it by the prospect of slow starvation. The latest command from Vichy, however, is a fresh indication of the labor difficulties with which the Third Reich is confronted.

What relationship this additional "collaboration" bears to Vichy's "practice" in anti-invasion tactics may become evident when the full purport of the new decree is understood by that large element of the French people which is waiting for the day of liberation from the Nazi yoke. Not even Laval, to say nothing of the aged Marshal, is under any illusion on this point. Machine gun posts and barricades in strategic areas of the provisional capital disclose a realistic assessment of an anticipated popular challenge to the imposition of this last straw. The swarthy "chief of government," of course, has built up his own army of renegades; to all intents and purposes these men form part of Himmler's Gestapo.

His signature on this labor conscription decree gives the world new proof of Marshal Petain's utter disregard for the welfare of the French people. Never before has such a debasing demand been made on them. This is the man who proclaimed at Bordeaux in June, 1940, that he had asked the conquering Germans for an armistice that would not be incompatible with a soldier's honor. Step by step since that fateful period he has allowed himself to become more and more the tool of Adolf Hitler—all his frequent assertions that he hated Pierre Laval notwithstanding. But the French people have yet to be heard from.

Health and the Worker

HOW NECESSARY IT IS FOR CANADIANS to keep themselves in good health, and what it may cost them in more blood, toll, tears and sweat if they do not observe elementary precautions, will be better understood by a study of the findings of United States statisticians. The following is a brief synopsis in simple terms:

"If there were no sickness among workers, our production front would save the equivalent of 150,000 men working five eight-hour days a week. That is as much manpower as we lose through those accidents which do not kill the victims. That is enough manpower to build 42,000 more bombers, 30 dreadnaughts, 100,000 tanks. It is a patriotic duty now to keep well. We can't avoid all illnesses, but government experts believe we could save 80,000,000 working days—almost a third of the total that is lost—by reasonable care."

It is interesting to note, by the way, that one of the most vital points of attack against sickness, according to the experts, is the homely lunch box. Nutritious, disease-resistant food is as easy and inexpensive to prepare as the unbalanced diet that many workers take to the shop. The Health League of Canada is doing a good work by emphasizing this and other safeguards for the health of Canadians on the factory front.

Stalingrad and Us

By H. P. H.

HE GAVE HIS MITE

HOW DO WE IN VICTORIA feel about the Battle of Stalingrad? Is it too far away for us to get the real "feel" of its immediate probabilities or the implications of a Nazi military triumph there? Perhaps we do understand it. The magnificent response of Victorians to Saturday's tag day is eloquent of something got easy to translate into words.

Take one example of which we can speak because we saw it from one of the windows of the room in which this is being written: A little chap of about eight or nine, neatly dressed in blazer and short breeches, knees and head bare, came level with one of the taggers. He paused for a moment; but only for a moment, then dived into his pocket. Out came a little purse. He hesitated for a second or so, as if wondering how much of his tiny capital he could spare to buy a tag; then he reached up and deposited his coin. He smiled, and the young tagger smiled as she pinned it on his coat. That little Victorian had got the feel of Stalingrad.

FOR THESE

BUT HOW MANY of the nearly 80,000 people who make up the population of Greater Victoria feel as that young "shaver" evidently felt on Saturday morning—the urge to make a sacrifice for a valiant people? Perhaps more than we think; as it should be. The question is pertinent: Is it not to manufacture odium for comparison. For it is time for plain talk here and in other parts of Canada.

It is time for all of us to awaken to a realization of what is going on in the approaches to the great steel city on the Volga. It is time for all of us to get it into our heads that the valiant defenders of that vast, straggling, strategic community named after the Soviet Union's resolute and realistic Premier are dying in their thousands before the brutal might of Hitler's mechanized legions in order that the Wehrmacht shall not breach the lifeline. It is time for all of us to realize the magnitude of the new difficulties that will face Russia in particular and the United Nations in general if the Nazi hordes sweep across this highly-important route over which British and American munitions have been reaching our gallant Allies from the Caspian Sea.

BLOOD AND DEATH FOR THEM

AGAIN, HOW MANY of our people stop to think that all the men, women, and children of Stalingrad are shedding blood and tears and sweat at this job of killing Nazi soldiers—every hour of the day and night? Do we realize that they do not and dare not stop to wonder if they are being paid enough for what they are doing? Do we realize that they cannot drop their guns to meet the walking delegate to discuss some fine point of local Soviet administration? Perhaps most of us do. But it will not do any harm to remind ourselves that these defenders of the metropolis on the Volga are gambling with their lives against odds the nature of which none of us can conceive.

If the Wehrmacht is held off, some of them will live to fight again. If Stalingrad falls, thousands of innocent boys—like the boy who bought a tag on Fort Street out of his meagre spending money—girls, women, and aged men will be slaughtered because they took up arms. Hitler has promised them this; he and his gang of cut-throats intend, as they unctuously proclaim, to observe the dictum of international law as it applies to francs-tireur.

WAR SAVINGS FOR US

AGAIN, HOW MANY of our people realize that if Stalingrad falls, if the Wehrmacht should eventually obtain the oil of Grozny and of Baku, the course of the war may be changed and lengthened for a few more years? Perhaps most of us do. But is this not the time for us to try to compare the even tenor of our way in this cloistered calm of Vancouver Island with the "blood, toil, tears and sweat" which are the lot of our valiant Allies on the Volga; time to say: "There but for the Grace of God and the gallantry of Russia go I?" Is it not time for us to stop niggling, haggling, and boggling almost at the mere sound of War Savings Certificates, Stamps, and the new Victory Loan to which it will be our duty, yes, and privilege, to subscribe?

All we are asked to do is to invest in the future of Canada, at a profit to ourselves, so that thousands of self-sacrificing souls in blazing Stalingrad can be assured that all the Canadian people are giving, and will continue to give, no matter how it hurts—their pockets. As we insist on our horse-racing, our unrationed liquor, and so on, for the sake of our own skins—if not for the defenders of Stalingrad—let us close our minds to everything else for a moment or two to the one thought that unless this war is won, and won at a not-too-distant date, what we do not lend voluntarily will be ruthlessly wrenched from us. Remember Stalingrad!

By order of the new Jap management, all Siamese will go to work at double time for Sundays and twins.

So swift and drastic have been last month's changes in the mercury, some of our banal conversationalists have been as much as 48 hours behind the weather.

The Old School Tie Myth

W. A. S. Douglas in Chicago Sun

A few days ago Lord Strabolgi, Labor member of the British House of Lords, came out with a powerful piece in a popular American weekly magazine blaming the general failure of his country's high command so far in this war on a very tough old rag which, according to a certain stay-at-home journalistic conception, is worn until death by the graduate of every British public school (private school to you).

Lord Strabolgi, being a product—along with this writer—of one of these alleged sticky morasses, ought to know better. But, among other things, the noble Lord writes for a living. Strabolgi—Lieut. Kenworthy, Royal Navy, in his old school tie days—very apparently got a cable from his editor something along these lines:

"Pan old school tie. Four thousand words."

So, like a good journeyman journalist, he went to it; he told a story that has been told time and time again—beginning with the Boer War when the British, wearing red coats and in close order, marched into Joubert's and Cronje's marksmen and were slaughtered wholesale—because, wasn't that the way Waterloo was won? Months before the United States had fought a power war in invisible khaki and with lines of skirmishers. But the old school tie just haw-hawed—and went to death or glory; mostly death.

Following strictly the formula of the "pan old school tie" story, as understood over here, Strabolgi went on to the retreat from Mons: with a machine gun per British battalion to the German whole machine-gun companies; but when he included the British military approval of the Maginot Line among old school tie blunders he blundered himself as badly as did the still anonymous director of the charge of the Light Brigade. For, my lord, did not the Germans build such a line, and in a fearful hurry, and call it the Siegfried Line? Despite beller in the powers of the blitz, the German high command had not dismissed static warfare as a dead dodo on European battlefields.

Were this article a defence of a system which is alleged to place so-called aristocracy or men of ancient lineage in high military places—regardless of qualifications—it could be pointed out that Wavell and Alexander, by heads and shoulders the best of the present crop of British commanders, are super-duper old school tie.

The trouble with Strabolgi is that he writes of the past, seeking to make it appear the present. The old school tie system in the British army began to fade in 1916 when men entitled to the colors of Eton, Harrow, Marlborough, Rugby and a few other high-priced seats of elementary learning, had piled their bones so high on the fields of France that the visible live supply from such sources was down to near nothing. Lots of them did not have to die but the "thing to do" was still to stand up while telling your men to seek cover. There were days, long, long ago, when the enemy, viewing such foolish valor, held its fire. But, let me warn you, young soldier, not any more; not any more.

Today, with armies of approximately the same strength, there are six times as many generals from the ranks in the British service as there are in that of

After 3 Years

From a Correspondent

Three years ago we sat in our chairs beside the radio and heard the outbreak of war flashed to this continent. In three years we have seen nations gear themselves for battle; we have seen the blaze that started on Sept. 3 in Poland flare across the world, until hosts are struggling on land and sea and in the sky.

When it all began, some of us had the courage then to look into the future. We could see the factories filling; the women at work; the marching men; the labeled packages going overseas. We saw the beginnings of sacrifice—the mounting taxes, the headlines, the "missing" lists. And we hoped it would not last long.

But have we the courage to look again into the future? It takes courage to face the facts of the present, to face the years ahead. Have we seen the discipline and dedication that are going to be required of all of us to bring victory? Has the passion really awakened in our hearts that is going to burn out apathy and soft living, our self-interest and jealousies and our private wars? For guns and tanks alone cannot pull us through. What is the passion that fires the man who fires the gun? Hate is the passion of a moment, and upon it nothing great or enduring has ever been built. Even if it nerves us to fight for our own lives, yet it will never inspire the peace that shall outlaw war in the lives of our children.

As we face the future after three years of battle—Greece starving, our men missing in the jungle and on the beaches of Dieppe—there must be a great force of self-giving across this land, steeling our wills, uniting men, speeding production. The passion to preserve the selfishness of the past is not enough to win victory. But no power can withstand an army and a nation fighting because they have faith in the future of their country and because they believe that every Canadian must have a chance to build that future. We must fight to build that new world—a hate-free, greed-free, fear-free democracy. When this is our united aim, then our strength will be the strength of 10 nations, and we shall be worthy of victory.

IS IT LOVE-CHARLES?

1. "Charles," snapped my Aunt, "you moon around like a sick hen. Is it love or have you forgotten?" I knew what she meant. "To avoid internal sluggishness" she'd always say "eat POST'S Bran Flakes—the delicious cereal with three benefits!"

2. She bounces into the grocer's, "I'll take none but POST'S Bran Flakes," she says. "They give three important benefits. One—enough bran for gentle action; two—useful amounts of iron and phosphorus; three—they're simply delicious to eat."

3. Now I feirly breeze in to breakfast, "Hurrah for delicious bran flakes," I sing, "you've chased away the blues and helped make me feel a man again." "You mean delicious POST'S Bran Flakes," reproves my aunt, "—never forget it!"

Get them for 3 important benefits:

1. A natural regulator which helps prevent constipation due to lack of bulk in the diet.
2. Useful quantities of iron for the blood and phosphorus for the bones and teeth.
3. Crisp, golden flakes—full of delicious, taste-tempting flavor and so good for you, too.

Girl Singer 'Wows' Desert Fighters

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE WESTERN DESERT (AP)—A pretty American singer, Mary Ellen Hughes—stage name Marilyn Williams—is "wowing" British desert fighters and winning their praise for courage under fire.

A tall slender brunette 22 years of age, Miss Williams is the daughter of the former Hollywood and New York singer Marion Harris, who now is in London. She is a direct descendant of President William Henry Harrison.

After training in New York and winning a talent contest there, Miss Williams went to London in 1938 and, with English actresses and actors, she volunteered to help entertain soldiers. Within 24 hours she was on her way to Egypt.

Soldiers are singing her praises for a performance recently at Tel-el-Eise Ridge—"Hill of Jesus"—when the daily shelling began. Travelling in regular British

Weddings

DAVIS-BYROM

Two well-known young people were principals at a quiet ceremony at the rectory of Our Lady of Lourdes Church Saturday evening at 7.30, when Rev. Father J. R. Buckley united in marriage June Anita, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Byrom, 1036 Craigdarroch Road, to Mr. Edward Addy Davis, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Davis, 910 McClure Street.

Mr. Byrom gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a semi-tailored suit of cherry-colored wool, with matching model hat and black accessories, and a corsage bouquet of gardenias. Miss Patricia Byrom, sister of the bride, was her only attendant wearing a basque dress in grey velvet, with matching model hat in Dutch-girl style, cherry-colored accessories and a corsage bouquet of red rosebuds. Mr. John H. Crookston supported the groom.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Byrom received the guests in a navy two-piece ensemble, with navy straw hat and corsage of pink rosebuds, assisted by Mrs. Davis, in a beige two-piece ensemble, with Havana brown hat, and corsage of yellow rosebuds. The three-tiered wedding cake centred the table, which was covered with a Madeira and lace cloth, arranged with white gladioli and asters and white tapers.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Byrnes and Miss Marguerite Byrnes of Vancouver were guests at the wedding.

For the honeymoon, which will be spent cruising among the Gulf Islands, the bride donned a beige coat in swaggy style. They will make their home in Edmonton, Alta.

NOBLE-DARKIS

The wedding of a Victoria couple which took place Sept. 5 in Seattle is recorded in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer as follows:

"Beneath an archway framed with white freesias, dahlias and gladiolas, Miss Estelle Darkis and John Patrick Noble were married last evening at a small, dignified ceremony in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford E. Noble, the bridegroom's brother and sister-in-law.

"Both the bride and bridegroom are from Victoria, B.C., where Mr. Noble is a member of one of the oldest pioneer families. His family came to the Canadian city with the Hudson's Bay Company and were among the first settlers there.

"Only intimate friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony as the lovely auburn-haired bride repeated her vows in a princess style lavender frock with a corsage of orchids.

"Vivian Odell Noble, the Clifford Noble's daughter, was flower girl. Only attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wise, who came from Kirkland with their niece, LaVerne Wise, for the occasion.

"After a small reception at the Noble home, the newlyweds left for a short honeymoon before returning to their home in Victoria, where Mr. Noble is associated with an electric company."

TATE-CUNNINGHAM

Northminster United Church, Flin Flon, Man., was the scene of a wedding Sept. 3 when Rev. J. Carlyle Parker united in marriage Margery Jean, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Cunningham, of Bounty, Sask., and Reginald James (Ray) Tate, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Tate of Victoria. Mrs. J. Bell was at the organ.

The bride entered the church on the arm of Mr. C. D. Day, in the absence of her father. She was gowned in a white satin floor-length dress, with a full-length veil of embroidered net which was gathered in halo effect and held in place by pink and white sweet peas. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli, red roses and fern. The bride was attended by her younger sister, Wilma Irene, in a full-length dress of br'dal pink sheer and white halo hat with matching veil, and carried a bouquet of salmon-pink gladioli and fern. The groom was attended by Mr. A. Murray Messner, Miss Ruth Delaine and Cadman's "At Dawning." The ushers were Mr. Calvin Berry and Mr. Don Wright.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Highfield Jr., Flin Flon. A buffet supper was served from a table centred with a three-tier wedding cake, standing in folds of pink tulle. The bride and groom were the recipients of many gifts, including a chest of silverware and a cheque from the Arctic Radio Corporation, where the groom has been employed for the past two years. Mr. and Mrs. Tate will make their home in Flin Flon, Man.

PENNER-RODGER

At Fairfield United Church Saturday evening Rev. W. J. Sipprell, D.D., united in marriage Eleanor Jane, younger daughter of Mr. A. Rodger, 1632 Amphion Street, and the late Mrs. Rodger, and Mr. Peter Walter Penner, 1617 Belmont Avenue, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Penner, Hepburn, Sask. Mr. John I. Smith was at the organ, and Miss Peggy Butterfield sang "Because" during the signing of the register. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length frock of white seafoam chiffon with embroidered bodice and bishop sleeves. Her finger-tipped embroidered veil fell from a coronet of orange blossom, and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and pink and white carnations. Her only ornament was a gold locket which belonged to her mother.

Mrs. William Dawson, matron of honor, wore a frock of rose taffeta and shepherdess hat trimmed with pink and blue flowers and a velvet bow at the back. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and mauve asters. The bride's sister, Miss Alice Rodger, and their cousin, Miss Katherine Ross, Vancouver, were bridesmaids in frocks of white voile with embroidered bodices. Their veiled pillbox hats of yellow tulle were trimmed with bows at the back, and they carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums and white asters. Mr. Rex Spencer was groomsmen, and Mr. William Dawson and Mr. George Zapolichny were ushers.

At a reception at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Rodger was assisted in receiving by his sister, Mrs. D. Murray, who was dressed in black and white with a corsage bouquet of pink carnations and white heather. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. F. Pryznysk and her daughter, Diane, from Alberni, and Mr. M. Mawer, Vancouver. An ecru hand-crocheted cloth covered the supper table, which was lighted with pink tapers and centred with cake, flanked by vases of sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Penner left for Vancouver, en route to Harrison Hot Springs, and on their return will make their home in Victoria. For traveling the bride chose a black tailored suit with black and white accessories and a corsage bouquet of purple heather and white carnations.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Wright receiving in a floor-length gown of delphinium blue chiffon. Major Harold Nation proposed the toast to the bride as she cut the cake.

MUCH WAR WORK
Besides various war jobs, the Guides of the Empire have contributed $50,000 for war purposes; providing two ambulances for the navy, several mobile canteens, and have supplied furnishings for quiet rooms for troops.

Although not a religious organization, each Guide is expected to carry out her duty to God by attendance at church and Sunday school; and the spiritual foundation of guiding is essential, Mrs. Abraham said.

Guiding is handicapped at the moment by lack of leaders, so many of the Guides having entered the services; but it is more necessary than ever in these increasingly difficult days. There are many problems facing the girls of today, and Guiding is an influence which should be felt throughout each community. The children of today are the generation of tomorrow, the future ambassadors of the Empire who will carry on tomorrow, and it is

Guide Leaders Urgently Needed To Help Girls

At a recent meeting of the West District Girl Guides, held at the Y.W.C.A., a local association was formed, the function of which is to take an interest in and encourage the Guide movement, backing up this wonderful movement by their moral support, and all women are urged to take an interest in this work and become Guide-minded," she concluded.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, Mrs. Spencer Elliott; president, Mrs. G. Phillips; secretary, Mrs. M. Evans; treasurer, Mrs. D. R. MacKenzie; badge convener, Mrs. B. E. Porritt; committee, Lady Coll, Miss Flora Burns.

NOT SCHOOL BUT PLAY

A Guide company, or pack, is not a school, but a playground, where children learn to play the game of life with honest friendliness and a good team spirit. The Guide is an older sister, not a teacher, guiding the child, as the name implies. There are three stages of Guiding: Brownies, Guides and Rangers. The training, which is divided into four sections, intelligence, handicraft, health and service, and the classified tests for which each Guide can train cover a wide range.

Guides today are proving invaluable, with their training, and above all their discipline, and even the smallest Brownie and Guide can be of service. In England many Guides have been decorated for bravely carrying out, during a "blitz," the Guide law of smiling under all difficulties. Camping is a great joy in the life of Guides, where together they learn much of the great outdoors, and the fun of open-air life.

There are also Extension Guides, for handicapped and crippled children in hospitals and sanatoriums. Lone Guides for children in isolated places, where by post they can become as proficient as the Guides in an active company.

Although not a religious organization, each Guide is expected to carry out her duty to God by attendance at church and Sunday school; and the spiritual foundation of guiding is essential, Mrs. Abraham said.

Guiding is handicapped at the moment by lack of leaders, so many of the Guides having entered the services; but it is more necessary than ever in these increasingly difficult days. There are many problems facing the girls of today, and Guiding is an influence which should be felt throughout each community. The children of today are the generation of tomorrow, the future ambassadors of the Empire who will carry on tomorrow, and it is of vital importance that they receive the necessary training.

In our zeal to destroy the enemy, we must not forget youth. The totalitarian countries give youth every consideration, but training them with tyranny and fear. The spirit of Guiding is service, with thoughtfulness for others, and with the very highest ideals. Many people not able to take an active part in Guiding, such as running companies and packs, can be of tremendous value in the local association, backing up this wonderful movement by their moral support, and all women are urged to take an interest in this work and become Guide-minded," she concluded.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, Mrs. Spencer Elliott; president, Mrs. G. Phillips; secretary, Mrs. M. Evans; treasurer, Mrs. D. R. MacKenzie; badge convener, Mrs. B. E. Porritt; committee, Lady Coll, Miss Flora Burns.

"TAKE A TIP FROM US: Give the man in service a gift that will serve him—BULOVA!"

Miss Joan Patton arrived from Vancouver this afternoon and will give a pianoforte recital Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. W. Benning, Rockland Avenue, in aid of the comforts fund of the P.P.C.I.L. While in the city she is the guest of Miss Sara Spencer, Moss Street.

Sports Mirror

By PETE SALLAWAY

WITH THE CURRENT National League baseball race between those beloved bums of Brooklyn and the St. Louis Cardinals the centre of interest these days no doubt fans will appreciate the dope on the remaining games to be played by both clubs. All the odds favor the Dodgers as they face the lowly Philadelphia Phillies and Boston Braves at the close of the season.

Here's the schedule for Brooklyn, giving the clubs they stack up against and the number of games to be played: Cincinnati 1, Boston 1, Philadelphia 7 and Pittsburgh 2. Remaining games for the Cardinals are: Chicago 4, Pittsburgh 2, Boston 2, Cincinnati 2 and Philadelphia 1, with the Cardinals to pick up another game in a double-header not mentioned in the schedule. So one can see where the Dodgers have the edge with those seven big games with the last-place Phillies.

But don't ever think those Dodgers and their fans are not worried. And it isn't all because the Cardinals are an outstanding club. A number of key Dodgers have been around for some time and there are unmistakable signs that they are tired. Dolph Camilli has been in a slump and Pee Wee Reese hasn't been too well. Reiser, the 21-year-old center fielder and National League batting champion hasn't been the same since he crashed into the wall in St. Louis.

On the other side of the fence the New York Yankees are moving along ever closer to another American League pennant. That deal the New Yorkers pulled off with Washington the other day makes one smile. Washington, 33 games off the pace at the time, was allowed to peddle outfielder Roy Cullenbine to the champions for $10,000 or so. Evidently the remainder of the American League wanted to make certain the Boston Red Sox wouldn't overtake its perennial champions. Or was it that they sought to make sure the Yankees would not enter the world series short-handed?

Talking to Jack Bowden, brother of Victoria's Tommy and Gerry Bowden, visiting the city from Westfield, N.J., he informed us Muzz Patrick is now a member of the military police in the United States army. Just before departing for the west, Jack was in New York and talked to Muzz while he was directing traffic at one of Gotham's busy spots.

The visiting member of the Bowden family takes an active part in semi-pro baseball around his home town in the capacity of an umpire. He works several times a week and some years ago made a strong attempt to break into big league umpiring but was turned down on account of his age. We asked him about the current major league races and he named Brooklyn and the New York Yankees for the world series, with the Yanks repeating their success of last season. Regarding the American League campaign, Bowden expressed the opinion the Yanks were just coasting and could have clinched the pennant weeks ago if they had so desired. "But it would have been bad for the league for them to get too far in front," Bowden said.

Smart Racing Opening

Killarney L Cops

Running like the champion he is, Killarney L, best sprinter this province has ever produced, made opening day at the Willows race track Saturday notable by setting up a new track record of 1.39 flat for the mile to take the inaugural Saanich Handicap before an enthusiastic crowd of 6,000 that had installed him favorite at slightly better than two to one. Shouldering a burden of 120 pounds as if it were a feather, the big gelding from W. H. Smith's stable showed no signs of the foot injury he sustained only two races ago, shot out of the gate like a scared rabbit and gave jockey D. Allen an armchair ride in opening up a four-length lead at the half to jog the last four furlongs and finish, easing up, a clear length in front.

Both Sunny Park and Steveston Bill took a run at the winner, but lacked the speed to catch him.

AUSPICIOUS START

It was an opening day that augurs well for the 14-day meet in Victoria. Well-matched fields, a fast track, a good crowd and a generous play at the mutuels all contributed to give a zip to what will probably prove to be a record session at the Willows as far as attendance and betting is concerned.

There was only one rank upset in the afternoon, Simtee, after running in allowance and handicap affairs for the last two years, taking on a field of $700 claimers and showing a dismal race to finish sixth in an eight-horse field, disappointing the thousands who had backed him down to approximately even money.

Generally, however, racing was true to form in spite of four winners paying double figures for a two-dollar bet. Simtee and Acero in the last race were the only favorites to finish out of the money, the last-named finishing last in a field headed by Bob Jack, an overlay if ever there was one, at nearly five to one.

Yanks On Flag Doorstep

Cards Head Dodgers

St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers are beginning to look like a couple of "playboys" with empty pockets "fighting" for the cheque in a nightclub, and it might be that they've just discovered the New York Yankees are about to clinch the American League pennant.

You know, the National League winner has to take on the Yanks in the world series, and in five of the last six sets that has turned out to be an unhappy predicament.

The hour has arrived when the Yanks can put the clincher on the 1942 flag. A victory for the Bombers in Cleveland this afternoon or a loss for Boston Red Sox in Chicago means the Yanks will have won their sixth pennant in seven years.

So, the news may have affected the work of the Dodgers and Cards accordingly. Anyway there were few signs during Sunday's firing that either the collapsible "Flatbush Polies" or the hot-and-cold Cards were any too anxious to get in there as the Yankees' sparring partners—or targets.

As a matter of cold fact, the Dodgers, after three days of dropping their stitches one at a time, came completely apart at the seams, losing both ends of a doubleheader to Cincinnati, 6 to 3 and 4 to 1. And it's probably a lucky thing they're able to close for repairs until their next start, Wednesday.

Meantime, the Cards were somewhat better in splitting a bargain bill with the Phillies to take a one-game edge in the race. But with a chance to make it a two-game bulge placed right in their laps, they handed the first game to the Phils 2 to 1. They did it on a couple of errors with two out in the ninth inning. After that, they took the nightcap, 3 to 2, when Terry Moore broke a tie with his fifth homer of the year.

WALTERS STARS

Brooklyn's efforts weren't nearly as close. In the first game, Bucky Walters pitched their ears off with a six-hitter and then knocked the roof in on them with a jackpot three-run double. And in the nightcap, Ray Starr, who has been about as tough for Brooklyn in the past as a walk in the park, tossed a five-hitter at them. In this "contest," the Dodgers proved that not only their pitching and their hitting and a good portion of their good old college try had gone bye-bye, but that their fielding also could play tricks. Third-baseman Lew Riggs committed three errors in one inning to help things along.

This tied a modern National League record, but before the afternoon was over, the mark was broken. The "hero" in this case was young Lennie Merullo, Chicago Cubs' new shortstop. Apparently excited over word that he was a brand new father, Lennie tumbled four in one frame of the Cubs' second game with Boston Braves, but Chicago managed to hang on in spite of it to win 11 to 8. The Braves took the opener 11 to 6.

The Yankees arrived at the pennant doorstep by moving down Cleveland 9 to 1 and 4 to 1 behind Red Ruffing and Hank Borowy. The Red Sox also clicked twice, over Chicago White Sox, 6 to 1 and 5 to 0, with Bill Butland winning his seventh in a row in the first game and Tex Hughson collecting his 19th victory in the afterpiece. But it still left the Bostons in a spot where the only way they can still win the pennant is to take all their remaining games while the Yanks lose all their outtings.

HOPE FOR ARENAS
Edmonton and Moncton, for two, are hoping the military will be able to turn their rinks back to civilian use for hockey matches this winter, but Regina fans have a more unusual problem.

The roof of the Queen City gardens there blew off in a wind storm, and will take both lumber and priorities to fix. Latest word is the work will be completed before winter. . . . Football enthusiasm is high in Quebec but slightly higher than the available supply of equipment. That factor may restrict what looked one week ago like a 10-team league. Veteran coach Bill Hughes will boss the Lachine air force outfit.

GOVERN PLAYOFFS
The P.C.A.H.A. will act as governing body for the two new proposed leagues and will be in complete charge of the playoffs. The officers follow: President, Jack Ryan, Nanaimo; vice-president, Ken Mackenzie, New Westminster; secretary-treasurer, Harry Forward, Nanaimo; commissioners, Eric Cox, Victoria; Jerry Berry, Nanaimo; Don Service, Vancouver; George Cassidy, New Westminster.

The resolution passed by the P.C.A.H.A. to cover the new set-up follows:
"That the P.C.A.H.A. operate with teams playing as a unit on the mainland, and teams to compete as a unit on the island. Each unit to be governed by its own executive, with both units coming under the jurisdiction of the P.C.A.H.A. The parent body will govern the playoffs between the two units. The winner of the playoff will represent the P.C.A.H.A. in the provincial play-downs."
Tommy Thompson, representing Vancouver, informed the meeting it would be impossible for the Norvans to travel for hockey games this season, and further stated he could give the league no assurance the Forum would be available for hockey this winter. New Westminster representatives informed the meeting they were not interested in entering a club under the league's set-up of last season, which saw clubs in Victoria, Nanaimo, New Westminster and Vancouver. It was also brought out that the Victoria team playing under the colors of the V.M.D. would not be able to travel to the mainland for regular league games.

It was then that the delegates decided on the scheme to operate an island and mainland league, which met with the unanimous approval of all.
President Ryan and Secretary Harry Forward presented an annual report for last season's operations which showed the league to have experienced outstanding success in the promotion of hockey.
At the opening of the meeting, the representatives observed a minute's silence in tribute to the late Harry Jones, former manager of the Vancouver Forum, and an ardent supporter of hockey.
Attending the meeting from Victoria were H. B. (Barney) Olson, Pete Sallaway, Ivan Temple and Leo Attwell.

With a gross score of 73, which his handicap reduced to a net 68, Walter Newcombe won the medal competition at the Victoria Golf Club Sunday.
Roger Peachey and A. S. G. Musgrave tied for runner-up with scores of 81-11-70 and 78-8-70, respectively.

Greco May Get Jenkins Bout

By SCOTT YOUNG

TORONTO (CP)—Johnny Greco, the Montreal lightweight, may get a fight with fading Lew Jenkins this fall. Ex-champ Jenkins isn't getting much work these days, and probably could be had, but a frantic beating through the bushes by Greco's manager, Pete Audette, has failed to uncover a promoter to stage the fight. Greco could make the boys forget all about Dave Castilloux and Maxie Berge if he could beat Jenkins, even if the former titlist is on the way down, and speaking of forgetting, whatever became of plans to match Castilloux and some one for war charity.

The name Douglas is a big one in British Columbia lacrosse. Johnny, Ralph and Fred Douglas play for Norvans and Jimmy for New Westminster. Jimmy became famous with the old Adnacs out there. He's just 24, but he's uncle to Norvans' three members of the clan.

Senior Hockey League To Operate On Island

Three Local Clubs, Nanaimo Will Compete

By PETE SALLAWAY

NANAIMO—Plans for the organization of an island senior amateur hockey league to include teams from Victoria Machinery Depot, Army and Navy of Victoria and Nanaimo Clippers were laid here Sunday as the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey Association held its annual meeting to discuss prospects for the coming season.

The possibility of a fifth club to represent the R.C.A.F. at Pat Bay was also broached at the session.

First steps towards the formation of the new league will take place at Victoria Thursday night when a meeting will be held with delegates in attendance from all clubs interested. President and other officers will be elected at that time, and the many details worked out in regard to operating the island circuit.

Present arrangements call for a league to also operate on the mainland. This all hinges on whether or not the Vancouver Forum will be available for hockey this winter. If the mainland league operates plans are for the winners of the island and mainland loops to play off at the end of the season for the right to represent the P.C.A.H.A. in provincial play-downs.

With delegates in attendance from Victoria, Vancouver, New Westminster and Nanaimo, it was decided that the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey Association would remain in existence. The meeting was of the opinion that too much work and time had been spent in organizing the coast league for it to pass from the hockey front. With that idea in mind the representatives were unanimous in returning the complete slate of officers.

Services Lift Lacrosse Cup

Box lacrosse in Victoria, as far as the senior clubs are concerned, closed up the season Saturday when United Services defeated civilian All-Stars 20 to 15 to take possession of the special challenge cup. It marked the second straight victory for the Services.

Although they took the floor without Jack Williams, Art Dixon and Jesse James, three of their star players, the Services showed they had plenty of scoring strength. The three named players have been drafted to another area.

After taking a 6 to 4 margin in the first quarter the Services were always out in front.

Kenny Featherstone paced the Services with five goals, while Gibb Stevens topped the All-Stars with six. Andrews in goal for the All-Stars turned aside 37 shots, as compared to 23 for Louis Moro.

'BIRTH OF BABY' CAPITOL FEATURE

Greatness, after all, is a relative term. There have been "great" pictures in the past, made both here and abroad; pictures that seduced the eye with splendors, the ear with sweet sounds and the mind with cunningly contrived plots. Until now that has seemed to be enough. Now, however, with the appearance of "The Birth of a Baby," which is being shown at the Capitol Theatre, it seems that all foregoing screen efforts have lacked something. That something is Truth, and once you have seen "The Birth of a Baby" you, too, will agree that it is the most important element a picture can have.

It is truth that gives "The Birth of a Baby" its power. No sound effect cleverly dubbed in has ever been so stirring as the actual beating of the heart of the unborn baby within its mother. No super-spectacle involving thousands of extras has ever had the emotional and spiritual power of the authentic pictures of a baby coming into the world. And no picture has had the perfect cleanness, the entire absence of anything suggestive or vulgar that the simple truth brings to "The Birth of a Baby."

Laurel and Hardy Tangle With Dante

Laurel and Hardy are coming to the Dominion Theatre tomorrow in "A-Haunting We Will Go," a rollicking film—magic, murder, mirth, action and romance.

Just when we need it most, it seems that Stan and Ollie have come up with their hilarious best. And something new has been added in the person of Dante, the great magician, who performs feats never before seen on the screen.

Sheila Ryan and John Shelton are teamed in the romantic interludes. They are just two people happy in love, until Stan and Ollie's misadventures inexorably encompass their lives, too.

But, it looks this time as if all of Stan's and Ollie's bungling will have to be forgiven, because it inadvertently brings a gang of criminals before the bar of justice and threatens to bring down the house.

'KING'S ROW' ON CADET-SCREEN

Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan and Betty Field top the cast of "King's Row," the new picture which opens today at the Cadet Theatre. The film, adapted from recent best-selling novel of the same name, is the story of two romances set against the background of a small midwestern town at the turn of the century.

Sam Wood directed the production from the script by Casey Robinson, based on Henry Bellamann's novel which was one of the best-sellers of the past decade.

SHEPHERDS SING GAELIC TO FLOCK

Two shepherds over 80 give Celtic atmosphere to Richard Llewellyn's "How Green Was My Valley," the current 20th Century-Fox attraction at the York Theatre which was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck.

The older shepherd had to sing out to his sheep and dogs, so Director John Ford got one who could speak and sing in Gaelic. He passed the sheep-herding test with flying colors and with toothless gums yammered some phrases for the director and Maureen O'Hara, who knows the language.

"How was it?" asked Ford. "Sounds fine to me."

"It's good he is singing Gaelic," said Maureen, speaking in the vernacular. "But it's no teeth the poor man has at all to speak it with!"

Walter Pidgeon, Donald Crisp, Anna Lee and Roddy McDowall head the cast of this picturization of Richard Llewellyn's best-selling novel about Welsh miners.

'EAGLE SQUADRON' HELD AT PLAZA

Robert Stack, who plays opposite Diana Barrymore in Universal's "Eagle Squadron," held over at the Plaza Theatre, portrays a California aviator who joins the celebrated squadron and flies a Spitfire against the Nazis. PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Baseball commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis Sunday ordered Pittsburgh Pirates to return catcher Ben Warren to Philadelphia Phils. Warren was claimed by the Pirates on waivers recently.

Landis said it was not proper for a player of major league calibre to be traded or sold by a club which still had games to play with teams that are contenders for the pennant.

REVIVAL WEEK AT OAK BAY

In this modern age of the horseless carriage, Charles Flagg manages to make an excellent living out of hayburners and antiquated carriages, renting them to the movies.

For 25 years his hobby and business has been buying up ancient chariots of every type and authentically renovating them until they are as bright and shiny as the day they were put together.

A coach-and-four and two smaller carriages of 1820 vintage from his stables, added colorful touches to English village scenes in the picturization of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," starring Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier and coming today to the Oak Bay Theatre for an engagement.

RICHARD GORDON as Dr. Wilson hears the throb of an unborn heart in "The Birth of a Baby," thrilling drama of married love at the Capitol Theatre.

'Bedtime Story' Riotous Comedy

The staff of the hospital on the Columbia lot recently had a busy day doctoring a couple of black eyes, numerous bruises and a few other minor injuries that resulted from a scene in Columbia's delightful "Bedtime Story."

The scene, a free-for-all brawl, is engineered by Frederic March, co-starred with Lovely Loreta Young in "Bedtime Story," uproariously funny new comedy at the Atlas Theatre. "Bedtime Story" tells of a Broadway star and her playwright husband, constantly at odds because he forgets his wife in order to tell bedtime stories about other women.

Driver Charged

Find Negligence
In Webb Death

A verdict of culpable negligence was returned by a jury under Coroner Dr. W. C. Hart today in the death of 48-year-old Arthur Joseph Webb following an accident Thursday when the car which he was driving was struck by another car driven by Eric A. Moore, 18, a shipyard worker.

The jury found that Moore's car had been driven at an excessive rate of speed.

The evidence today showed that Webb's car was driving east on Haultain Street at a slow rate while Moore's was coming south on Foul Bay Road somewhat faster. Moore's car crashed into Webb's car, driving it up the bank.

Dr. E. McNiven, who was called to the crash, told the coroner Moore was dazed after the accident and kept repeating questions. He said there was no trace of liquor on Moore's breath.

Giving evidence under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, Moore said he had no recollection of events on the night of the accident and could not testify as to his speed.

Other witnesses were Mrs. Zeta Webb, wife of the victim; B. F. Collins, Cpl. K. Featherston, John Gilley, Const. Stanley Holmes, P. Waterbury, Const. J. Wilson, P. Bailey and G. F. Libbey.

Following the inquest Moore was arrested by Oak Bay police and charged with manslaughter.

Second Conspiracy Hearing Opens

Asked Condemned Goods
Be Sent to Sumas Needy

F. H. Harrison, provincial government purchasing agent, said in police court today he had requested L. J. Simmons, former provincial police quartermaster, to send to the mainland only condemned police clothing which Mr. Simmons had told him would be burned.

Testifying at the preliminary hearing before Magistrate Henry Hall in the conspiracy to defraud charge laid against Mr. Simmons and John Graham Simpson, managing director of James Maynard Ltd., Mr. Harrison gave that explanation in reply to question by P. J. Sinnott, counsel for Mr. Simmons.

"Did you instruct Leonard (constable in the provincial police quartermaster stores department) to send boots to Forbes in Vancouver?" Mr. Sinnott asked.

Mr. Harrison replied he had made the request for condemned clothing only. The Mr. Forbes was the same man who had looked after government horses, he said. Witness stated the clothing was to be distributed to needy farmers in the Sumas area.

The purchasing agent said he had followed custom in calling for bids on police shoes and had sought tenders from Wm. Catcart Co. Ltd. and James Maynard Ltd., Mr. Harrison gave that explanation in reply to question by P. J. Sinnott, counsel for Mr. Simmons.

Repeating to question by Mr. Sinnott he said he could not explain why it had been the practice to call for bids from those two firms only. It was his duty to select the firm and to fix the unit price, he said.

NO OUTSIDE INTERFERENCE
Mr. Harrison denied Mr. Sinnott's suggestion he was subject to outside pressure in awarding contracts. He admitted, however, statements at the departmental inquiry to the effect he was gaining some success in trying to break down political interference in purchasing matters.

It had been his custom to submit lists of contracts to members of Parliament to keep them informed of business in their constituencies, the purchasing agent said.

Questioned on purchase of police boots, he said he had asked Mr. Simmons why they were not bought wholesale. "He threw me off the track by saying we had to buy retail to care for fittings and exchanges," witness said.

Asked if the commissioner had signed requisitions, he said "If I'd known there was anything wrong with the requisitions, I would have had the commissioner's signature and a lot of other signatures on them."

John Harvey, deputy comptroller-general for B.C., listed shortages in police shoes between requisitions and stock-book entries and stated some requisitions had notes for boots on them which were not included in copies sent to receiving constables for receipts. The actual shortage in boots from Sept. 1, 1936, to Dec. 1941, amounted to 1,832 pairs.

Constable R. Hugh Leonard, testified he had parceled summer issue for constables and had not included boots. Later Mr. Simmons, at his home, had asked him to make an entry of boots on those forms. He had not done so, he said. He gave evidence on statements by Mr. Simmons the latter "was fed up with doing this and that for everyone, was going to quit and join the army."

McGill Principal Sees Sacrifices
"From now on this war is going to necessitate increasingly severe sacrifices for every one of us," Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill University, warned today in an interview at the Empress Hotel.

"We are going to pay higher income taxes and lend more to the government, we are going to be compelled to go without many of the things to which we are used and we are going to have to work a lot harder than we have ever had to work before," he said.

However, Dr. James said he finds comfort in the fact that the willingness to do all these things is already apparent, "and that spirit is the greatest guarantee of victory we have."

"This war effort of ours has involved very little sacrifice to us as a whole, except of course the tremendous sacrifice of the families of those men lost overseas," he said. "The bulk of our civilian population is better off than ever before."

The tall, youthful, English-born chief of Canada's greatest university will have a busy three days, on his first visit to Victoria.

Today he had two sessions with B.C.'s Postwar Rehabilitation Council. He met the chairman, Hon. H. G. T. Perry, Minister of Education, and three members of the council — Mrs. Tilly Rolston, Mrs. Nancy Hodges and J. A. Paton, spending an hour and a half with them.

"I think British Columbia is making a splendid start," Dr. James said. "This province is ahead of every other Canadian province in this regard."

In Dr. James' opinion, planning for the postwar period is most important.

Wanders on Boat, Has Long Swim Back

An Indian, under the influence of liquor, found himself aboard a passenger steamer leaving Victoria for a U.S. port.

He was discovered on board when the ship was half way out of the inner harbor, and the captain ordered the ship to turn back to drop the unsuspecting traveler.

"I'm a Siwash, and I can swim," the Indian said, before the captain could give the order, and as he said it he dived over the rail and swam to the wharf near the C.P.R. docks.

Coming from the water he went to the C.P.R. dock and bought three ice cream cones; one for himself and one for each of two youngsters who were at the stand.

"I'm a Canadian, and I want to stay in Canada," he told Miss Joan Carrington, newsstand attendant.

Roy W. Thompson was charged in city court today with smashing a plate glass window of the B.C. Lands and Investment Agency Saturday night. Pleading guilty, he was fined $25, and $78 to cover the cost of replacing the glass.

34-Year Old Jean Knox
Is Youngest Maj-General

Youngest major-general in the world, and the topflight ranking officer in the British Empire's growing women's army, arrived in Victoria today. She is 34-year old Maj.-Gen. Jean Knox, here at the invitation of national defence headquarters to inspect the ranks of Canadian Women's Army Corps.

Gen. Knox, director and controller-general of the Auxiliary Territorial Service in Britain, was accompanied by Brig. J. E. Lyon, Lt.-Col. E. M. Gower of London, Eng., Lt.-Col. Joan Kennedy, former Victoria woman now commandant of the Canadian Women's Army Corps with headquarters at Ottawa, and Maj. Margaret Eaton, also of Ottawa.

In command of the C.W.A.C. welcoming guard-of-honor was Capt. F. E. Scott.

Four years ago, Gen. Knox was an Englishwoman whose home, husband, and daughter Julie, aged 11, took all her time.

Now, through her own effort and determination to help England win the war, she has risen to the command of 150,000 troops, amongst which are women operating plane-detectors for heavy anti-aircraft guns, and fitting detonators into finished bombs.

It is the firm conviction of this slight dark-haired woman with her ready smile that there is a place for every woman in the war effort. Since she became senior commander of A.T.S. in March, 1941, Jean Knox has toured England, encouraging members to bring her their problems, examining all conditions of the service, inspecting camps, and inaugurating a system of military drill for physical training that is more like ballet routine than the ordinary army regulation setting-up exercises.

Herself a splendid example of the policy that women in the service should be smart and attractive, Gen. Knox's move for the improvement of the A.T.S. uniform and her subsequent permission for the use of modified make-up and nail-polish was very popular with women who are determined not to be "frumpy" or mannish just because they are sharing a man's responsibilities.

"The uniform counts tremendously," she claims.

Today Gen. Knox toured the Pacific Command at West Point, inspected the Canadian Women's Army Corps, visited the C.W.A.C. personnel at Gordon Head.

This evening Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. W. C. Woodward will entertain in her honor at Government House.

lnces, as no national situation existed beyond the power of the provinces to deal with.

CHURCH RESOLUTION
Mr. Thorson said the resolution presented last Saturday to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mr. Crerar and himself from the general council of the United Church was of a different nature. It asked that the quantity of alcoholic beverages produced in Canada should be drastically curtailed by limiting the amount of material which might be used by the distilleries, breweries and wineries.

The resolution further asked that the amount of alcoholic beverages released from bond should be reduced to two-thirds or one-half of the present rate in some what the same way as tea and coffee are rationed and, further, that the alcoholic content of beer, wine and spirits should be reduced, that liquor advertising and shipments of alcoholic beverages overseas should be stopped, and that a federal-provincial conference be held to carry on an educational campaign for temperance.

It was the opinion of the government, Mr. Thorson said, that these were requests which could be considered by the Dominion as likely to come within federal jurisdiction.

Charged with stealing tools from his fellow employees at the V.M.D. shipyards, William H. Barnes was sentenced to serve 12 days on each of three charges in city court today, sentences to run concurrently. "It was a small and mean thing to do," said Magistrate Hall.

Dorothy Dix: Wife Fears Husband Will Be Untrue Again

Dear Miss Dix—Is there any way of overcoming an obsessing fear? For three years my husband had an affair with another woman. I broke it up by applying for a divorce. When he thought he was going to lose the children and me he gave up the woman and settled down to become an ideal husband.

But I can't forget. I live in terror of his going back to her. I never see the mailman without shivering with fear that there will be a letter to him from her, calling him back. I never look out the window without dreading that I may see her walking up to our door. I even dream about her, and in my nightmares she is trying to break up our home again. My husband never speaks of her, never goes near her, so far as I know. He seems happy and contented and devoted to me now, but despite that I live in deadly fear of her.

What can I do to free myself of this black shadow that hangs over my life? Don't tell me to keep busy. I work from 5.30 in the morning to 11 or 12 at night. A mother with three children hasn't much leisure for idle thoughts.

WORRIED WIFE.

Answer: But she has. She has all the time there is for morbid brooding because the trouble with housework is that while it employs your hands it leaves your mind free to brood over any unpleasant thing that has happened to your life and to magnify it until you make a mountain out of a molehill. You don't have to concentrate on making beds and washing dishes and fixing the baby's bottle and patching Bobby's pants and darning your husband's socks; you have done the same things over so many times that you do them automatically.

HAS TIME ENOUGH TO WORRY

So while you are going through your daily routine you can worry over why your husband always has to pick out a good-looking young girl for a stenographer instead of a lonely middle-aged woman, or why Mrs. Jones didn't invite you to her party, or what would happen if John should lose his job—or any of the other million things people worry over who have an opportunity to do a good, consistent job of borrowing trouble. Maybe you have noticed how much more cheerful, easy-going and young-looking are the women who work outside their homes than are the women who work in them.

The reason is that a woman with a job has to concentrate on her work if she doesn't want to get fired. She has to keep her mind on her typing or her selling or her bookkeeping, or whatever it is she does. She can't indulge herself in nursing old sorrows, and in conjuring up imaginary new ones as can a woman who sits at home and rocks and broods while she sews her seam.

So your remedy, lady, is to get out of your rut or else you will end up in a nice padded cell. You are past the place where you can help yourself; you must have some outside assistance. The only way you can get this is by doing something so new, interesting and difficult that you will have to give it all your attention and won't have a minute to think of anything else.

You may say this is impossible; that you can't leave your children; that you cannot risk your husband's going back to the other woman in your absence; that you can't afford it. But you can. Peace and happiness and sanity are worth obtaining at any price. So have the courage to make the change that will bring your life back to normal. When a woman begins seeing the ghost of her husband's old love stalking her it is time to do something drastic. And do it before it is too late.

THEY ARE HAPPY THOUGH MARRIED

Dear Miss Dix—My husband and I made a marriage that everyone prophesied would end in disaster. Everything seemed against it. I was seven years older than he. We had no money. We belonged to different races and had different habits and tastes, but instead of our marriage being a failure it has been unusually successful.

Knowing that we had different backgrounds we made an extra effort to adapt ourselves to each other. I learned how to cook the dishes he liked and to which he was accustomed. We have never interfered with each other's religion. We never argue; we talk things over on which we differ and one or the other gives in. Because I am older than my husband, I make a special effort to keep myself neat and well dressed; make it a rule to go out together at least once a week, even if only to take a walk. And we don't forget to treat each other as lovers, even if we are old married people.

CLAIRE M. Z.

Answer: I think, Mrs. Z. you might well have ended your letter by saying: "Try this recipe for making a happy marriage and you will never fail."

The tragic mistakes of young people is in thinking the only thing that is necessary to make marriage a success is love and that if they thrill to each other's touch and have palpitations of the heart at the sound of each other's footsteps, they are bound to live happily together, ever after. But alas, in the nature of things, we cannot keep on thrilling and palpitating over a person we live with every day, and we get fed up on kisses and are bored with soft talk; we discover to our amazement that the tactics of courtship don't fit into the marriage pattern. And when this happens, too many youngsters in their disappointment and bewilderment over the wreck of their romantic dreams throw up their hands and quit.

Yet there are few marriages, perhaps none, that couldn't be salvaged by the use of a little common sense, a little forbearance, a little patience. For husbands and wives could adjust themselves to each other if they tried. They can refrain from quarrelling and continue to be in love if only they will make half as much effort to be as agreeable and interesting and attractive at home as they do abroad.

Life of Robert Burns: Early Years

Scotland has a county called Ayrshire, and it has an area of more than 1,100 square miles. Through it runs the Ayr River, which is only 20 miles long.

The hills and valleys of Ayrshire are dotted with farms, many of them of small size. In the low meadows and on the hill-sides we may see cattle, and the cows in the herds are among the best. Ayrshire cattle make up a famous breed, and may be ranked with Jerseys and Guernseys.

If we go back to 1759, we find in Ayrshire a farmer named William Burns. He owned a small farm, on which there were a few cows.

Toward the end of January in the year named, a child was born in the home of William Burns, the first of seven children. The infant was given the name of Robert.

When Robert was only 10 days old, a storm drove through the area, and the roof of the little farmhouse was damaged. Mrs. Burns took her baby to the home of a neighbor, and he stayed there a week until the father was able to fix the roof.

Life was a struggle for the Burns family, and the struggle

975 Packs Cards And More Wanted!

The boys in England want playing cards and they have to be sent from Canada because there are none in England.

H. J. Greatrex, 1054 Southgate Street, today received such an appeal from W. H. Spearman, manager of the Beaver Club, London.

Mr. Greatrex has already sent 975 packs to England, given by Victorians.

"Once more we have to thank you for sending us playing cards for use of the Canadian troops," Mr. Spearman wrote. "These cards are always greatly appreciated by the men."

Packs of cards for Mr. Greatrex to send to England may be left at the circulation department, Victoria Times.

Mrs. M. M. Barrett, 1333 Mitchell Street, has received another appeal from Miss Mimi Brodie of London, Eng., for ordinary used 1, 2 and 3-cent stamps.

"Anyone who desires to help Miss Brodie in her work of helping maintain cots for children in the Queen's Hospital for Children, should collect and send her all the used stamps, Canadian or from any other country," said Mrs. Barrett. Unless the stamps are sent to Miss Brodie in care of the British Philatelic Association Ltd., they are liable to seizure. The address is Miss Mimi Brodie, care of P.B.A., Board of Trade, 3 Berners Street, London, W.1.

July 14 was special "Victoria Night" at the Beaver Club, London, according to a message sent by W. H. Spearman, club secretary. A big party was staged and efforts were made to have every Victoria soldier, sailor or airman in London at it.

Monthly meeting of the Tuberculous Veterans' Branch, Canadian Legion, will be held on Tuesday at 8.

ONE MINUTE NEWS ABOUT JOHNS-MANVILLE

Old Sea Disaster Helps Fight War

Perhaps you have never heard of Maritane or Marine Sheathing, but no doubt you will remember when the luxury liner Morro Castle took fire off the New Jersey coast a few years ago. Well, it was a direct result of the Morro Castle disaster that Johns-Manville research men developed these two products for use as fire-resistant panels in steamships. Since their introduction, the age-old spectre of fire at sea has lost some of its former terrors. Now, J-M Maritane and Marine Sheathing are helping to fight the biggest conflagration of all—war.

Today, every square foot of these products that Johns-Manville workers can make is going into freighters, tankers, transports and auxiliary naval vessels. And in the face of the U-boat's challenge, these J-M men have increased production well beyond what was previously considered the maximum capacity of their machines.

SAFeway Homemakers' Guide

★ Some grand ideas on preparing fall produce ★ Safeway offers low advertised week-end prices Tuesday thru Saturday ★ A lesson on having fun

Here are some wonderful ways to prepare fall fruits and vegetables

They come from the Safeway Homemakers' Bureau and every one has been tested and proved in the Bureau's kitchen.

APPLES. Want a different kind of applesauce? Pour 3 cups unsweetened sauce into a well greased 1½ qt. casserole. Combine 1 cup finely rolled graham cracker crumbs, ½ cup sugar, ¼ tsp. cinnamon, and ¼ cup finely chopped walnut meats. Sprinkle crumb mixture over applesauce. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 30 minutes, or until crumb mixture is brown and crisp. Serve hot or cold with whipped or pour cream. Serves 6.

GRAPES. To vary familiar desserts, fold seedless grapes or halves of seeded table grapes into cooled blanc mange, custard, gelatin whip or rice pudding.

PEARS. If you like baked apples you'll vote for baked pears, too. Wash 6 pears. Leave whole; do not pare or core. Make syrup by combining 1 cup sugar, ½ cup water, and 2 tbsps. lemon juice in saucepan; stir well until completely blended; boil rapidly 5 minutes. Or substitute ¼ cups maple-flavored syrup for sugar syrup. Place pears in baking dish; pour syrup on top; cover dish. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until almost tender, about 30 minutes. Remove cover, increase heat to 450° F. and bake 10 minutes longer, basting frequently to glaze. Serve warm or chilled. Serves 6.

SQUASH, PUMPKIN, AND SWEET POTATOES. These vegetables are closely related and each may be used for the same type of recipes—baked, in puddings, pies, cookies, custards, and the like. Squash makes unusually delicious custard. Mix ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar, ¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. ground cloves, ¼ tsp. ginger, ¼ tsp. nutmeg, and ½ tsp. cinnamon. Beat 2 eggs slightly. Add 1½ cups milk and 1 tsp. grated orange peel; add to sugar-spice mixture, blending well. Add 1 cup sieved steamed Hubbard squash; stir until combined and free from lumps. Pour into individual custard cups; sprinkle with nutmeg or cinnamon. Set in pan of hot water; bake in slow oven (325° F.) 1 hour, or until set. Cool and serve plain or with whipped cream or maple-flavored syrup. Serves 6.
